The Governor said he was not ready to announce the successor to either official, asserting that he planned a conference next week with a special advisory committee which has been studying the wild-life division for the last several months. This commission is headed by Cason J. Callaway, LaGrange manufacturer. The Governor said the conference would be held as soon as Mr. Callaway can get the committee together for a session in Atlanta.

Burch in Hospital. Governor Rivers announced the resignations following a series of conferences with Mitchell. Burch is in Crawford Long hospital after an operation yesterday morning, but it was understood that the resignation was tendered at a conference of the Governor and comnissioner Wednesday shortly after Burch appeared before the house economy committee to explain the breakdown in his department.

Neither resignation text was made public by the Governor. Burch, whose home is at East-man, formerly was a field representative of the United States Department of Agriculture. Mitchell, who lives at Waycross, served for many years as clerk of the Ware planned.

One after another, Senators Pepper, Democrat, Florida; Mead, Democrat, New York, and Downey, Democrat, California, held the floor throughout the day, presenting their arguments on behalf of the federal spending program, until finally they were charged with fillibustering.

At issue was the question whether $100,000,000 or $150,000,000, the sum asked by the President, should be voted to carry WPA through to the end of the fiscal year on July 1. ### WHAT COULD HAPPEN!

The Saturday Evening Post this week takes a flinger into international politics with an editorial and an editorial article, written by Demaree Bess, in which practically everything the United States has done in Europe is raked

The Post is quite distressed at the stand taken by President Roosevelt against the aggressor nations and in support of the democracles. The Post casts the chief executive in the role of a Machiavellian delver into uncharted waters, drawing the ship of state into the flames of conflict in Europe. Mr. Bess throws up his hands in holy horror because, as he claims, the President attempted to steer Premier Mussolini back into the paths of comparative

Both editorial and editorial article present a picture from the standpoint of immediate consequences, and both quite utterly neglect the longer-range viewpoint which certainly forms a major part of the completed historical mural.

In common with other members of the isolationist school whose viewpoint they represent, the Post and Mr. Bess apparently cannot encompass in their thought processes the results of casting the democracies to the flames without offering a helping hand. They most certainly have not thought the problem through to a logical conclusion.

Speaking hypothetically, since it is inconceivable the people of the United States would so lose sight of reality as to follow the Post path, let us assume the United States withdrew entirely from the European picture.

An ascendant Germany could then wreak its will on the continent, over a period of years if not immediately. There would follow appeasement after appeasement until neither France nor Britain could maintain their freedom. Just as much as Czecho-Slovakia would they become vassals of the Nazi Reich, which would then stand as the richest country in the world, with slave labor and slave capital able to rip apart the economic structure of the United States. This country would have lost the first line of defense (frontier, if you will) and the protection of the British navy.

An equally ascendant Japan would control Asia, lock, stock and barrel-with coolie labor and coolie capital at its command.

The British navy in German hands, and a Reich and a Japan capable of building three or four ships to the one for the United States, this country would be faced with the superhuman task of building a mammoth two-ocean navy for the defense of the North American coast alone. South America would long since have been lost to human liberty. The only manner in which this country could compete with a condition of this kind-hypothetical, but too tragically possible-would be through totalitarianism of its own.

Does the Post want this for the United States? If not, then it had better heed the fact that the natural consequence of isolation will be the defeat of the European democracies and the loss of American liberty.

It is not the simple matter of staying out and keeping American fingers from getting burned. It is not a matter of forcing England and France to yield colonies and space to the German and Italian people. That path was tried, and even so staunch a peace-lover as Prime Minister Chamberlain admits its futility under present circumstances. That isn't what the dictators want. They want world domination-which they shall not have. Granted that a grave mistake was made at Versailles. But it is a mistake that cannot be rectified under conditions as they exist today. Hitler's word isn't worth the powder it would take to blow him up, and peoples cannot talk appeasement to a power-drunk megalomaniac.

Let America keep sight of the realities rather than go wandering down the blind alleys of theoretical debate. Whatever one may think of Mr. Roosevelt's domestic policies, whatever one may think of his tendencies to be Galahad to the world, he has guided the American foreign policy with an admirable hand along the only path it can take with safety. The

For-God's-Sake-Hide-Your-Head school is playing for high stakes without looking at their own cards.

FOR BETTER WEAPONS

In modern war it is probable that more depends upon the quality of the mechanical adjuncts than upon the heroism of the human material. The bravest of men are helpless before an enemy with the finest of fighting machines, when they themselves have only secondquality equipment that breaks down and becomes useless at crucial moments.

It is this fact that makes the German boasts of armed power questionable. Germany lacks many of the essential raw materials and according to such reports as have leaked through the stern Nazi censorship, the synthetic, or ersatz, materials used by the German armies have proven but weak substitutes for the real

Recently a new and miraculously superior method of finishing metal surfaces has been developed in the United States. Credit for this improvement is given to David Wallace, a research engineer with one of the large automobile corporations. It is, of course, invaluable in automobile construction, but it could easily be of even greater value to the defensive strength of the nation in the manufacture of armaments. It might, in fact, give this country a superiority of mechanized fighting material which would be the decisive margin of victory in war.

The new method is called "superfinish" and it is defined as a process enabling the production of almost frictionless metal surfaces, flawless to the millionth of an inch. Metal parts superfinished are said to be so smooth that if two discs are slid together it is all but impossible to part them without prying.

To understand the difference between the former process, known as "tooled finish," and the new "superfinish," it is necessary to measure in micro-inches. One micro-inch has about the same proportion to an inch as the inch has to 16 miles.

Under the old "tool finish" method, it is said, it was possible to smooth a brakedrum, for instance, to the point where the average depth of scratches upon its surface would be 110 micro-inches. The same surface, superfinished, has scratches only 11 micro-inches in depth. Incidentally, to measure the depth of these scratches, which means to measure the smoothness of the metal surface, engineers use a machine which magnifies the image of a metal surface 50,000 times.

The value of this improved process in smoothing metal surfaces is self-evident, both in peacetime industry such as automobile manufacture and all construction where extreme precision is required, as well as in the vital problems of war machine construction.

AIDING CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Nothing so touches the heart and, at the same time, arouses a determination to do something about it as a crippled child, a child handicapped by twisted, distorted or undeveloped limbs even before life's race has well begun.

It isn't often that the people, as a whole, are given the opportunity to contribute, directly, to help such handicapped children. Poor children, who, without public assistance would remain crippled throughout life. Such an opportunity, however, is being given the people of Atlanta today. "Bunny Pins," a token of the wearer's interest in restoring some afflicted child to health, are being offered for sale on the streets by the Fulton County Crippled Children's Society.

Coincident with the sale of "Bunny Pins" every lodge of Elks in the state will give a dance Saturday night for the purpose of raising funds to purchase a convalescent home. The lodges in Atlanta and Decatur have joined forces in this worthy caus Easter, the season of joy, affords a fitting occasion for bringing happiness and usefulness to afflicted, suffering, humanity, particularly to these crippled children. It is their only opportunity for a restoration to health.

It is worse than a social blunder to yawn in a person's face; it is a medical faux pas, as spring fever is spread that way.

It suddenly dawns on one of the popular historians that the World War never stopped. Versailles, in this new interpretation, was a seventh-inning stretch.

This spring, the Hollywood divorce season coincides with a better theme song than usual -the popular "I Get Along Without You Very Says an Omaha enthusiast. "A cold bath on a cold morning is a mental tonic." As the mind improves, of course, one sees the folly of it all.

Editorial of the Day

LAZY LAWMAKERS.

(From the New York Herald Tribune.) If the pay of our representatives in congress is not exactly munificent, at least it is handsome enough to warrant some slight study on their part of the measures brought up for their consideration. Yet we find the house passing "unani-mously and without debate" the Dempsey bill to deport any alien who advocates "any change" in the American form of government. Originally the bill stipulated "any fundamental change," but the "fundamental" was eliminated. makers in their haste objected even to this vague approach to specification.

We confess to a profound sympathy with the purpose of the bill. All foreigners in this country its guests and should observe the amenities of their status, one of which is to refrain from agitating revolution. On the other hand, it is essential that we discriminate between the arrogant violator of this canon and the friendly critic. We can well afford the latter's counsel; in fact, the belief that we can is one of the pillar's of our na-What can one say, then, of a stamtional faith. pede to send him packing together with the real offenders against our hospitality? Is this panic or simply the stupidity of lazy lawmakers? The latter explanation is the more plausible, especially in light of the similar den the senate over the bill "to take the profits out of war." Like the 50 senators who sponsored of war. Like the by senators who sponsored this absurd measure of confiscation, most of them without reading it, the house voted for the Dempsey bill because it sounded popular, not bothering to consider either its implications or its unenforcibility. How are the courts to construe a provision visits condign punishment on an alien for advocating "any change" in our form of govern ment? Suppose in private or public he sides with President Roosevelt's reorganization plan. Must we hand him his hat?

Very possibly the situation demands legislation to rid the country of Communist and Fascist agents from abroad. The problem of its proper and effective enactment cannot be solved in any such slipshod fashion.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

SEQUEL TO APPEASEMENT WASHINGTON, April 7.—An washington, April 7.—An appropriately ironic sequel to the great business appeasement drive was provided the other day by a dinner in New York. On the occasion in question, the lion and the lamb—the New Deal and business—lay down together in a private room at 21 West 52nd street. Considering the restaurant, it is a fair guess that the food was as millennial as the company.

The party was a mere accident. For some time, George Roberts, of counsel to the Commonwealth & Southern, has been in the habit of giving men's dinners for his favorite left-wingers. His friend, Morris Ernst, counsel of the CIO in the Frank Hague case, has also Morris Ernst, counsel of the CIO in the Frank Hague case, has also sometimes entertained his favorite tories. They decided to join for an evening, and accordingly assembled the ebullient secretary of the monopoly committee, Leon Henderson; the chiftain of the CIO, John L. Lewis; the ex-brain-truster, Rex Tugwell; the president of the Commonwealth & Southern, Wendell L. Willkle; the publisher, Nelson Doubleday, and one or two others.

Ordinarily, the result might have been just another of those rather pompous but agreeable talk-tests for which political and business leaders have a weakness. But the ghost of business appeasement, killed while still in intancy, was also present. The memory of its untimely death turned the talk to just what could be done to bring business and the New Deal closer together and Morris Ernst, counsel of the CIO in the Frank Hague case, ha to bring business and the New Deal closer together, and, above all, to stimulate recovery.

SIX POINTS The talk's real significance lay in the extent of agreement developed between Willkie and Henderson. These two, with Lewis and Roberts, led the conversation. That the lawyer and the labor leader should discover grounds for agreement was not altogether unexpected. But it was quite anthing to find the New Deal's pet economist and the onceembattled leader of the utilities' united front saying "Yes, Mr. Willkie," and "Yes, Mr. Henderson," as though there never had been such a thing as the holding company act.

True, they did differ on the one great point of spending. Hen-True, they did differ on the one great point of spending. Henderson stated that a public works program to employ 2,000,000 was needed for recovery. Willkie, perhaps recalling the PWA's municipal power plants, strongly dissented. The points on which their minds met in a general way were reminiscent of business appeasement, which also avoided the spending issue. The points were:

1. Business, labor and government should get together to talk out their problems, much in the manner suggested to the President more than a year ago by the delegation led by John Lewis and Thomas W. Lamont. 2. The Morgenthau-Hanes suggestions for tax revision ought to be acted on promptly. (Although he must have been conscious of the President's rejection of tax revision, Henderson went so far as to approve lowering the highest income surtaxes, as a confide oducing "token" or gesture.)

3. If the utilities would come to Washington and lay plans for plant expansion on the line, the government should make some of the concessions they desire. 4. Some agreement should be reached by government, labor and business to stimulate private housing construction.

5. A program to stimulate American export trade, such as that now being pushed by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., ought to be in force. (On this John Lewis was especially en-6. Broadly speaking, if recovery is to come, private enterprise must bring it about, and therefore the government should bend all its energies to persuading private enterprise to get to work.

AND THE PRESIDENT Various other proposals were made such as one from Henderson for low-ering social security taxes on behalf of the consumer. But the foregoing was the real meat of the talk. The participants found it so exciting that plans were made to continue and expand the discussion, bringing in the AFL president, William Green, and more business and New Deal leaders. Such plans have a way of coming to nothing, and perhaps these will. Even if the discussions are continued, they are likely to be fruitless. In the end, the President must be included. Such movements have been started again and again. They have always ended when they reached the White House, for the President has always d in them a savor of retreat. Nevertheless, the dinner at 21 was distinctly significant. It revealed the remarkable prevalence of the belief that something must be done, whatever it is. (Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

If War Comes

By HUGH S. JOHNSON.

Most Vital WASHINGTON,
D. C., April 7.—
The hearings before the senate Foreign Relations Committee are the most important single happening in this country today. They are called hearings on the "neutrality act." They are far more than that. They are the beginning of the great de-bate as to whether the United States is again going to war to make the world safe for-not 'democracy" this time—but the

Anybody who doesn't think that this is the real question at issue hasn't followed the course of recent events very closely—or doesn't realize the great strength or volume of the propaganda that has been going on for over a year to suck us into some European military alliance or association certainly with England, probably with France, possibly with Rus-

Ever since President Roosevelt's amous "quarantine" speech, there have been many other utterances which show that, so far as the administration is concerned, it has already decided to support those countries. It talks of measures less than war but more than words— meaning quarantining or strangling unfavored nations by embar goes or other trade or financial restrictions. But that in itself is economic war and not even the proponents of that will deny that if it fails to win its objects, military war is the certain next step.
What is being discussed in the senate committee is whether the administration shall be given power to take this first grave step.

We Ought If we are going to To Know . war, we ought to know what we are going to fight for. We are told the "democracies" and so we prepare to defend countries of the western hemisphere and to rely on arming them and an alliance with them, and we draw closer and closer to association with Britain and France. I earnestly believe in getting ready to defend this hem-isphere. But to call that, or this general trend, a defense of "the democracies" is just cynically cruel, hypocritical sloganeering— precisely the same slicker stuff hat drew us into the tragic blun-

England is now in alliance with Poland. Poland is a dictatorship. Of 25 Latin-American countries, at least 20 are dictatorships or communes and one—Santo Do-mingo—is about the bloodiest, most savage and vicious dictatorship in the world. And if the coming alliance includes Russia wouldn't that be the nuts? No dictatorship in the world is so ruthless and deadly or farther from democracy. In any such lineup as is imagined, there would be many more dictatorships on our side than on the other. If we are going to get into a war let's not be kidded, or sloganeered or bam-boozled into it as we were 22 well, if it isn't to defend democracy, what is it for? Obvious-ly it is to maintain the existing pattern of empire, trade areas and territorial boundaries. Why not say so? Because not many Americans would be willing for us to fight to preserve Tunisia France, for example, as "for democracy.

"Democracy" to fight to preto fight to preserve the borders of the 20 American dictatorships from Hitler-not for "democracy because they are not democracies—but to defend our own democracy. But why should we fight to preserve houndary lines in Europe or Africa or Asia about which, Roy Howard said yesterday: "V know little or nothing and care less." We certainly don't want to do that if our only reward is to be billions in cost and hundreds of thousands of ended or ruined live plus another wreath of bay-leaves. later proved to be made out of poison ivy.

If we are to be drawn into this let us know very clearly what we are going to fight for and why we have to do it. Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution.)

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

THE TIP OF TEXAS BROWNSVILLE, Texas—(By Air Mail)
They call it "The Valley of the Lower Rio Grande," but coming in from the air one can see it is no valley.
It's a delta, a flat land with the river, the winding border line between Mexico and Texas; a few lakes and the gulf giving it a picturesqueness that looks like no valley at all but a great garden.
We came in just after the dawn and it was almost impossible to believe what I knew—that 40 years ago this was little more than a jungle. Now it is a criss-cross of towns and canals and fields of fruit and vegetables. It also is a great aviation center with Pan-American having here the northern terminus of its lines and now comes Eastern Air with its southern terminus. For the former it has been since 1929 the base of a service which extends through the Mexican since 1929 the base of a service which extends through the Mexican capital and Panama to all portions of South America. For Eastern Air its a part of the international run from New York to Mexico

City, connecting with Pan-America.

Gathering information from Texans in the plane, I knew the delta was further south than any of the rest of the United States excepting only the small island of Key West and the last 45 miles of the tip of Florida.

A CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MAN A Chamber of Comby the lapel before my ears had become adjusted to ground level.

I think I heard him a-right.

This, he said, was the Garden of Eden for grapefruit. There are more than five and a quarter million grapefruit trees here in a land area not all cleared and not larger than the state of Delaware.

Most of them were planted about 15 years ago.

I think he said the trees had not yet reached their full maturity and were bearing below par. And that despite this more than 16,000 cars were shipped out and 13,000 more turned into canned juce. The favorite with many is the pink-colored grapefruit with no seeds to be dug out. A co-operative association controls about 46 per cent of the total output and has built two canning plants to take care of the juice from surplus crops. These two co-operative factories last year canned two million cases of juice and it is estimated the private plants canned as much. This, the Chamber of Commerce man said, was about 12,000,000 gallons and if dumped into a lock of the Panama canal would fill the lock, which is 1,000 feet long by 110 feet wide, to a depth of 14 1-2 feet, enough to float a ship.

AS TO VEGETABLES When Christmas comes to the remainde of the United States, some 200 cars of fresh vegetables roll out of "the valley" each week.

By April, right now the man said, there were 1,000 cars of vegetables moving out each week and by mid-April there will be 1,200 cars moving each week. By then the full production of new potators having received and by the state of the production of new potators having received. toes, beans, onions are added to the monthly winter production of cabbage, broccoli, parsley, endive, escarole, carrots and beets. This, with southern Florida and the Imperial Valley of California are the great vegetable gardens of the United States.

He held me by the lapel and showed me mountains of vegetables being squirted with hose, being packed with shaved ice, being stored into ice-packed crates in cars; vegetables in the fields.

The sale of vegetables equals the sale of citrus fruits.

Watching the careful grading and packing, I thought of the Georgia growers and the tremendous competition they face. Georgia does not yet grade or pack as do these people. They go to the markets with the very best they have. There is competition from the markets with the very best they have. "the valley" in most of the grocery stores of the nation. And it is BROWNSVILLE ITSELF The town of Brownsville is less than 100 years old. The remainder of the section is so new that Brownsville seems ancient in comparison. Tough old Zachary Taylor founded the town in 1846 when he brought down his soldiers and established camp on the Rio Grande I had never seen the Rio Grande looking so much like a real river as here where it joins the sea. Before I had seen it only a El Paso where it is a very small and shallow river. Here small steamboats can use it. Down at the mouth its muddy waters push ar out into the gulf as it keeps on bringing down silt to make larger

'the valley." There was most of the day here, or at least a large sector of it before came time to board ship and fly to Mexico City, capital of the republic across the Rio Grande.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise: Some years before I was born, an eminent Scotch physician, driving on a country road with an equally famous companion, came upon a plowman working in a field and stopped to make a cruel

Having introduced himself to the plowman, the physician pre tended to see in him the unmistakable symptoms of a fatal disease with an awe-inspiring Latin name. "You will be dead," said he 'in 48 hours."

The terrified yokel went home and died. The Aborigines of Australia, most primitive men on earth, are also the most superstitious. They have complete faith in witchcraft. The medicine man of the tribe, who may be the chief, puts a hex on them when he thinks they deserve capital punishment. Now, these black fellows aren't weaklings. When one of then has a badly infected foot, he digs a hole in the ground, places the foot in it, and then rakes a bed of coals arou burns it off. That, I imagine, requires some fortitude. Yet when the medicine man puts the hex on this stout fellow and tells him he is going to die, he simply gives up and dies. He believes he is going to die, so he up and does it. The simplest mind, you will observe, has power over the body even unto death. London's vital statistics in 1600 may have been right in reporting that some person had died of a broken heart.

The mind's power over the body is a thing worth remembering, but it has another and greater power, even more dreadful whe misused. It has the power to destroy itself.

Why do you suppose more than half of our hospital beds are 'mental cases" and more people are losing their min occupied by every year?

The usual explanation is that people can't bear the strain of our complicated, modern existence, but I don't believe life is any more complicated than it used to be—except in the matter of and entertainment. People lose their minds because they don't use them right. They learn to enjoy self-pity before they are weared, but most of them outgrow it. The others, tricked by the "little learning" that is dangerous, develop the habit of thinking constantly about themselve the wrongs they suffer, the unfairness of their families, the inof life in general—and then they try to analyze their em tions and nervous disorders and reactions and mental processes, and finally their minds are so full of themselves there isn't room for anything else.

If you could turn your eyeballs inward, your brain would seem the only thing in the world. That is about what happens to people who turn their thoughts inward.

It's the habit that gets them; but with the whole fascinating world to think about anybody conceited enough to think about himself is a little cracked already. Love, (Copyright, 39, for The Constitution.)

BALTIMORE, April 7.—New weapons against disease—some of which may prove even more effective than the miracle drug, sulpaint forged in the control of the cont fanilamide—are being forged in the test tubes and in the blood streams of the rabbit and guinea pigs of American chemists.

they are not to be used on human beings until they have been thor-oughly tested in medical laboratories, a half-dozen of these were described before the American Chemical Society, meeting here

Since sulfanilamide was introduced, physiologists have speculated as to its possible value in checking the ravages of the tubercle bacillus, still one of the great scourges of the human race. Early experiments at Johns Hopkins University and in Europe have shown that, in very heavy doses, the drug has the power to inhibit the increase of the bacilli in animals—but the amounts given are very close to the poison limit in man. The effect is so weak and the danger so great that all ex-perimenters in the past have rec-ommended against the use of the substance for this disease.

Tests on guinea pigs have shown, the chemists reported, that the new drug is considerably less toxic than sulfanilamide. Massive doses of human tubercle bacilli given the animals-doses sufficient ordinarily to have killed them rapidly-formed only local sores at the sites of the injections can take care of it.

A new compound closely related to sulfanilamide, which is considerably less poisonous but much more effective against pneumococci in mice, was reported by Drs. George W. Raiziss, L. W. Clemens, M. Severac and J. C. Moetsch, Philadelphia chemists. By administering this drug into the stomach, they were able to keep the animals alive for a week or more after they normally would have been dead. They don't know what the effect would be on humans.

Official concern over the lates totalitarian step was reflected by Hull, who besides telephoning Mr. Roosevelt at Warm Springs on two occasions, kept in constant touch with official American observers throughout Europe and received a visit from Faik Konitza, Albanian minister, for details of Mussolini's march.

Minister's Reaction.

Konitza, who conducts his na-tion's affairs in a local hotel, likened the Italian action to that of a prizefighter who knocks down a child, and ventured the belief that King Zog, leading guerrilla warfare against the Italian troops, would "die fighting" rather than capitulate.

An important sidelight not only on the Albanian situation but on the entire European picture was contained in the disclosure that the State Department has obtained 1,550 gas masks from the army

He talked sev-eral times with Secretary of State Cordell Hull in Washington, It was not revealed whether President had communicated diectly with any United States ambassador in Europe.

The President had no comment on European developments. Officials of the temporary White House did not attempt to minimize concern President Roosevelt felt as result of the Fascist invasion of Albania, the mysterious movement of German troops, and the Nazis' warning to Poland, Great Britain and France. Mr. Roosevelt only last week was represented as seeing a definite move toward world domination by the Berlin-Rome axis, and he was reported to believe that these recent developments in Europe were justifying his convictions.

The federal government provides 50 per cent of the money for the assistance of the blind and the aged, and 33 1-3 per cent of the assistance for dependent chil-

Deen emphasized that these funds "are spent in local com-munities, rural and urban," and said a reduction in the rolls as of May 1, this year, would cause an estimated annual loss of $900,000 in federal funds.

An estimated 16,000 children, old people and blind will be suspended due to the legislature's failure to provide the necessary appropriations, the welfare head stated, the department being the department being forced to reduce the amount of state aid on pensioners now on

Old age pensioners receive an average of $8.59, Deen said, while the average payment to the blind is $10.80, and dependent children

$7.87 per child monthly.

The director explained that there are 59,000 applicants for old age assistance whose cases are now pending, and about 47,000 of this number are eligible for assistance, requiring an estimated monthly expenditure of $274,880, of which amount the counties would furnish $27,488; the state $109,952, and the federal govern-ment $137,440.

Removal of State Barriers Urged in Program by Conference.

CHICAGO, April 7 .- (P)-Representatives of 44 states and four territories today approved a broad program for the restoration of free trade among the states.

They requested the Council of State Governments, sponsor of the three-day conference on the removal of state trade barriers, to take these steps:

1. To discourage the adoption of any retaliatory legislation by states "which feel themselves aggrieved by the legislation of their neighbors."

2. To encourage the repeal of trade barrier legislation already

3. To foster the enactment of uniform laws and the adoption of reciprocal agreements designed to reduce trade barriers between the

4. To co-operate with various commissions on interstate co-oper-ation in calling regional hearings to carry out the recomm the conference.

Any state which regarded itself as adversely affected by legislation of another state was invited to arrange a parley on the dispute through the council.

The conferees advocated a return to the "traditional policy of free trade among the states in order that the producers and con-sumers of the nation may buy or sell without legal discrimination either as to the place of origin of goods, the method of transportation or the efficiency of the pro-

They also urged congress to continue an effort to reach an "equitable freight rate basis for the entire United States." Governor Carl E. Bailey, of Arkansas, had suggested they approve equaliza-tion of northern and southern freight rates. Nine southeastern states have joined in a move to re-move differentials which, they

Paul Townsend, 5, grandson of Senator John G. Townsend, Republican, Delaware, was killed tonight when he fell from the 20-foot roof of his home to the flag.

Writer a way from Georgia has written a way from Georgia has written a song called "Blue Monday."

Mrs. H. G. Frazier, of 1386 Sylvan road, explained yesterday that several years ago she traveled a great deal, but she always had a yearning to get back to her native state.

Mrs. Frazier was born in Miller and foot roof of his home to the flag. to get the blues when she was lows:

LOSSES OF GEORGIA BY MIGRATION CITED

Continued Exodus of Population Would Mean 200,-000 Less in 1960.

A population for Georgia in 1960 of more than 4,000,000 or a population of 2,900,000-200,000 less than at present—were alternatives outlined here last night by Professor Walter Coutu, of the department of sociology of the University of Georgia.

Discussing population trends before a meeting of the co-ordinating committee of the Citizens' Fact Finding Movement in a downtown hotel, Professor Coutu said:

"Of the 3,500,000 persons who have migrated to other states from

have migrated to other states from the 11 southern states, one-fourth have migrated from Georgia.

Huge Economic Loss.

"If this continues, in 1960 Geor-gia will have a population of 2,900,000 or 200,000 less than to-day. But if there is no migra-tion, then the population will rise to 4,000,000."

Continuing his discussion of population trends, Professor Coutu said that the south as a whole, in 1960, would have a population of 35,000,000, if migration was halted. He also said that the economic loss to the south through migra-tion "amounted to as much as the national debt."

In the discussion on education, Dr. Walter D. Cocking, dean of the college of agriculture at the University of Georgia, said the south "is educating one-third of the nation's children with one-sixth of tion's children with one-sixth of the nation's income."

Childhood Education.

"In delaying the work of build-ing a road," he said, "we are perhaps inconveniencing some persons for a time. But the road remains to be improved later. Not so with a child. Childhood is his only time to get an education. If he misses that, then he never gets it."

Dr. Guy Lunsford, director of the division of county health work of the State Department of Health, spoke of the relationship of health to solution of other human and economic problems

Professor J. R. Huber, of Emory University's school of business administration, discussed problems of private and public income. W. C. publican, Delaware, was killed tonight when he fell from the 20foot roof of his home to the flagstones of a patio.

Roof Not Yet Designed That Is Wide Enough for Two Families

What Is Wife's Duty To Her Mother-in-Law?

By Caroline Shatfield.

Theoretically it's not hard to pass on in-law problems. We can all join the chorus which says the roof is not yet designed that's wide enough for two families; nor the kitchen roomy enough for two women; nor the living room big enough for a man and his mother-in-law? We can agree it is in-law? We can agree on the general propositions that the old cramp the style of the young; that the young are heartless and hard with the loneliness of age: that with the loneliness of age: mat the old are out of tune with youth; that the old meddle and the youngsters resent it; therefore, they shouldn't double up and live do about it when her husband retogether. Generalizations, all of

But what have they to do with specific and crucial in-stances such as this: Here's a young wife embarked on the perlious experiment of a fiftyperilous experiment of a fifty-fifty marriage. Her husband can't swing the expenses of the household and she works di-viding the cost of everything they buy. Suddenly her father is taken; her mother left pen-niless and utterly dependent be-cause she's not trained to work and lacks initiative too.

It's out of the question for the daughter to support her mother in a separate establishment, so she moves her into the tiny apartment. After a month husband begins to howl that mother-in-law is in his doesn't get-out, he will. The poor wife is nearly distracted, afraid to leave the two under the same roof another day, lest there be a scene and mother discover the facts Yet she's unable to devise any plan for taking care of the old lady elsewhere. Who can pass on that problem and tell the daughAnother equally perplexing:
Here's a woman who has been married twenty years and during all this time she's had her husband's father and mother living with her. They have one sitting room and the old folks naturally want to be around where the fun is. The young daughters in the home getting sick and tired of having their dates chaperoned by curious oldsters have taken to parking dates, looking to privacy.

fuses to let her suggest to his par-ents that they sit in their room in the evening and give the living room to the youngsters? She doesn't want to hurt old folks' feelings any more than her hus-band does, but she thinks the children are entitled to this much consideration. However her hands are tied. Who can pass on that question and tell the mother the way out?

All of which should be an incentive to every pair of parents to begin, when they are young, to save for the rainy day of old age; in case social security and old age pensions go out like a light and leave them at the mercy of the succeeding generation which seems always to have problems in plenty without inheriting any.

In women femoral hernia is where vessels, nerves, lymphatics and a ligament of the uterus pass from the pelvic cavity into the thigh.

The main seat of the weakness in all hernias is in the voluntary muscles of the affected region. If the muscles are flabby the pro-trusion tends to increase gradualtone, resilient or vigorous by proper exercise, the protrusion tends to decrease gradually, and if the hernia is not too large to begin with or too long neglected or irreducible (that is, not even tempo-rarily corrected by manipulation) it is always reasonable to hope for ultimate cure from (a) efficient truss or other means of support and (b) regular performance of exercises adapted to the type of hernia and the individual condi-

Support is much more important, in the cure of hernia by any means (injection, operation, truss, exercise) than is ordinarily real-ized. For example, after any method of treatment is once unlertaken, taking off the truss or other support for even a few min-utes may mean that all the treat-ment up to that moment has gone for naught, for a single protrusion of the hernia may break down all the adhesions or natural barriers so far gained toward the ultimate cure, and a fresh start must be made.

It is not only unnecessary but unsafe to attempt any kind of ex-ercise without wearing truss or ercise without wearing truss or other support or supporting the hernia carefully with one or more fingers of one hand while doing he exercise.

Should Study Labor

CHICAGO.—Yesterday afternoon I read in "Occupations," the vocational guidance magazine, a symposium entitled "Youth and Labor." The idea was that youth should be taught something about the labor movement in school and, naturally, that the teachers should know something about it.

The following eminent gentlemen were asked to contribute something helpful to the teachers and the pupils from their store of knowledge: William Green, John L. Lewis, Leo Wollman, John J. Collins, George Barton Cutten. All have written articles which would take far more space than this column has at its command to discuss comprehensively. However, I want to draw four things to your attention, in the hope that you will read the symposium.

things to your attention, in the hope that you will read the symposium.

One is that Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis ignore one very basic point in their argument. They urge youth to join unions, and few of us will question some of the advantages which they list, but how about the fact that many young people, in order to join a union, must serve some years of apprenticeship, and that this opportunity is not always open to them? Secondly, that many occupations are still unorganized and will require years of education to be organized.

Third, Mr. Collins, in his argument for the independent union, appeals to the natural individualism in us all, but neglects the fact that employers have the strength of wide organization. Will the strength of the employe, restricted to his own plant or group of plants, be as great?

Finally, Mr. Cutten contends that labor unions should be equally responsible with employer organizations—and that, I think, few of us will deny—but the closing sentences of his article are not as simple as they sound: "It is usually believed that competition is nature's only law—the law of the jungle. That is far from true. Cooperation is as much a natural law as competition, but nature is very careful to have these laws properly placed. Labor unions have not followed this rule."

It is quite true that co-operation is the law in some of nature's units—the bees and ants are an extremely good example—but that co-operation doesn't protect them from man, for instance. Nothing which Mr. Cutten says is untrue, but it seems to me that he does not go quite far enough in his theory: "Let us refine natural laws as much as we please, but when we ignore or confuse them, nature is bound to have her revenge." A very delicate operation, this refining process; one, I warrant, that comparatively few of the businessmen of today have thought through, so one cannot blame labor if it has not done so, either.

I still thrill to the fact that I can cross this continent in such a short time. We left Seattle last night at 9:15, and if all goes well we will have been less than 15 hours in actual transit. Coming this way we lose three hours, so our flight did not actually start until 12:15 eastern standard time this morning. In Chicago we have a chance to stretch our legs a little and try to tidy up sufficiently to look presentable on arriving in New York, but not time enough to leave the airport. We're off again in a few minutes, so I'm filing this here, just in case I should be too late for my deadline in New York.

"Ho, Miss Linton!" cried a deep voice. "I'm glad to meet you. Don't be in haste to enter, for I have an explanation to ask and obtain.' "I shan't speak to you, Mr.

Heathcliff," answered Catherine. Papa says you are a wicked man and you hate both him and me and Ellen says the same."

"That is nothing to the purpose," said Heathcliff. "I don't hate my son, I suppose; and it is concerning him that I demand your attention. He was in earnest in his letters: in love, really. As true as I live, he's dying for you; breaking his heart at your fickleness."

"How can you lie so glaringly to the poor child?"I called from the inside. "Pray ride on! Miss Cathy, I'll knock the lock off with a stone; you won't believe that vile

"I was not aware there were eavesdroppers," muttered the detected villain. "Worthy Mrs. Dean, I like you, but I don't like your double-dealing," he added aloud. "I swear, on my salvation, Linton's going to his grave, and none but you, Miss Linton, can save him!" The lock gave way and I issued

"Nelly, if you won't let her go you can walk over yourself. But I shall not return till this time next week, and I think your master nimself would scarcely object to ner visiting her cousin!

"Come in," said I, taking Cathy by the arm and half-forcing her to re-enter; but she lingered, viewing with troubled eyes the features of the speaker.

He pushed his horse close and bending down: "He pines for kind-ness, as well as love, and a kind word from you would be his best medicine. He dreams of you day and night, and cannot be persuaded that you don't hate him, since you neither write nor call."

I closed the door and rolled a stone to assist the loosened lock in holding it, and spreading my umbrella, I drew my charge un-derneath: for the rain began to drive through the moaning branches of the trees, and warned us to avoid delay.

The master had reitred to rest before we came in. We took our tea together, and afterwards she tea together, and afterwards she lay down on the rug, and told me not to talk, for she was weary. I got a book and pretended to read. As soon as she suposed me absorbed in my occupation, she recommenced her silent weeping. But next day beheld me on the road to Wuthering Heights by the side of my wilful young mistress' pony. I couldn't bear to witness her sorrow; to see her pale dejected countenance, and heavy eyes, and I yielded, in the faint hope that Linton himself might prove, by his reception of us, how little of the tale was founded on fact.

We entered the farmhouse by the kitchen way, to ascertain weather Mr. Heathcliff was really absent; because I put slight faith in his own affirmation.

I stirred up the cinders and fetched a scuttleful myself. The invalid complained of being covered with ashes; but he had a tiresome cough, and looked feverish and ill, so I did not rebuke his temper.

"Are you glad to see me?" asked Catherine, pleased to detect the faint dawn of a smile on his lips. "Yes, I am. It's something new to hear a voice like yours!" he replied. "But I have been vexed because you wouldn't come. And papa swore it was owing to me: he called me a pitiful, shuffling, worthless thing; and said you despised me."

"Despise you? No! If only I could get papa's consent, I'd spend half my time with you. Pretty Linton! I wish you were my

"And then you would like me as well as your father?" observed he, more cheerfully. "But papa says you would love me better than him and all the world if you were my wife; so I'd rather you were that."

"No, I should never love any-body better than papa," she re-turned gravely. "And people hate their wives, sometimes."

Crackers Spot Tubize 'Nine' 8 Runs But Rally To Win, 10-9

This corner suggested hopefully the other day that Georgia legislators might yet see fit to vest control of the natural resources division-principally the Game and Fish Departmentin the capable hands of a citizens' commission.

And so it is very encouraging indeed to learn that the economy committee of the house has requested Cason Calloway, head of a citizens' committee appointed by the Governor long ago to study conditions, to appear before them for the purpose.

Calloway is to be quizzed by the economy commit-tee on Monday. This committee seems to be getting things done. And it would not be surprising if hunters and fishermen of Georgia are given a break before it's Personally, I do not see how the economy committee could do otherwise than give the people who pay the way—the hunters and fishermen—a voice in the management of affairs of state in which they are vitally-and financially-interested.

But I would not be one to say what the economy committee should do. Cason Calloway is the one to do that. He presented a bill before the legislature adjourned that adequately covered the situation. The bill died a natural death, as did a substitute bill which covered only the State Game and Fish Department.

Why should the better folks of Georgia who hunt and fish be placed in such a frame of mind, under present conditions, as to ask themselves, "Why should I buy a fishing license? Where did the hunting license money go?

It is no secret that people are asking themselves these very questions every day. They were not exactly astounded to learn that their State Game and Fish Department was virtually dethat their State Game and Fish Department was virtually dethat their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually dethat their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn their state Game and Fish Department was virtually delearn the first t funct, but it was enlightening to see it in black and white, any Money derived from hunting and fishing licenses alone is enough to support the State Game and Fish Department. There is no need for appropriations. Of course, the department is deep in debt now but, properly managed, it can be dragged out of the muck and mire of insolvency.

I am morally certain that all Georgia sportsmen want to do the right thing. They want better hunting and fishing conditions and are perfectly willing to do their part by purchasing licenses. But I am afraid they will refrain from so doing until they can be assured of some return on their investment. Many simply will forego their sport.

A noted sportsman asked a question yesterday that seems to cover the entire matter simply and adequate-ly: "Would anyone knowingly invest in a proposition that couldn't possibly show you a return?"

All Georgia sportsmen will pin their faith on the judgment of the house economy committee, feeling, perhaps, that every cloud must have a silver lining. And feeling, too, that anything which hits rock bottom must have help to rise again.

SCOTT SEES FASTER RACE.

Major Trammell Scott, who has been here and there watching Southern league clubs in action and keeping an alert finger on the pulse of public feeling, predicted yesterday that "the Southern league race will be even faster than last year."

Reminded that the race of last year was pretty close going down to the wire, President Scott replied, "That's right. And I am willing to go on record right now as saying that the lines will be even closer drawn this

The Southern league attracted more than a million customers last year and there is evidence of new fan interest that will click the turnstiles at an even brisker pace this summer.

SOMETHING TO BE THANKFUL FOR.

Memphis, without Oscar Eckhardt, a powerful hitter, still may be a potent factor in the Southern league race. But the Crackers have plenty to be thankful for in the fact that Joe Grace no longer graces the Chick lineup.

Joe Grace was anathema to Cracker pitchers, both Ponce de Leon and in the Chick park. If he had been able to hit against other clubs as well as the Crackers he would have had a batting average of almost .500

South Carolina Tops Georgia Nine, 11-1

Joe Grugan Gives Bulldogs Only 7 Hits; Jack Clifton Is Beaten.

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—A kid named Joe—his last name was Grugan—hurled South Carolina's state championship baseball team to a 11-1 victory over Georgia here today in the opening contest of a two-game series.

The bespectacled pitcher, giving up only seven safeties, was never in danger during the ball game. Georgia exhibited its worst form of the year, failing completely to hit in the pinches and committing seven errors.

Jack Clifton, Bulldogs southpaw ace, failed to live up to recent per-formances as he was hit freely in the two innings he twirled.

He was replaced by Alex McCaskill in the second stanza in which the visiting nine put four runs across the plate. Carolina's catcher, John Burns, was the hitting star of the game, getting four singles and a double fivetrips to the plate.

George Stallings and Joe Gerson were the only Bulldog players able to get as many as two hits off Grugan, all of the Georgia hits were singles. Bob Smith, outstanding sophomore pitcher, is slated to take the mound for Georgia in the second game of the Gamecock series Saturday.

REAL ESTATE-RENT TARZAN AND THE FIRES OF TOHR No. 36

When the warriors had surrounded them, Tarzan saw that it was futile to resist. There were half a hundred of them, and each had a spear ready for action. Slowly the circle closed in, and one who was evidently their chief stalked confidently toward the Jungle Lord.

Aubrey Williams Lauds Program of 15 Resident Centers.

"Thoroughness and variety" of the program of the 15 resident work centers maintained by the NYA in Georgia was highly comtional Youth Administration, who arrived from New Orleans, after inspecting NYA centers there. He will go to Warm Springs, today to confer with President Roose-velt, and expects to return to Washington either next Monday or Tuesday.

He was high in his praise of the work done in Georgia by D. B. Lasseter, state NYA director, and members of his staff. The resident work centers are maintained by the federal agency more or less as adjustment bu-reaus for the youth of an econom-ically maladjusted nation.

"All we can hope to do," he said, "is give some experience in showing what can be done," ex-plaining that while he didn't consider the NYA permanent, it should be continued until the country found solutions to tech-nological displacement and other forms of unemployment.

He will ask for $125,000,000 this year so the NYA can help a million youngsters with their education. There are approximately 650,000 on the rolls at present.
